Master

A bachelor's degree in Contemporary History – this opportunity is open to you only at the University of Fribourg. The programme focuses on the 19th and 20th centuries in Swiss and European Contemporary History offering introductory survey courses accompanied by seminars elaborating on specific topics thereof. In addition you are introduced to the historiography of Contemporary History. You will acquire skills in analysing and contextualising historical sources, in reading and digesting secondary literature, in presenting an historical argument as well as in writing your own texts. Our large number of teaching staff offers you a broad range of topics and ensures that the students are closely mentored, thereby facilitating the compatibility of class room and work place. The programme can be taken in German, in French and as a bilingual programme in German and French.

Profile of the study programme

The objective of this bachelor programme is to provide an overall survey of Swiss and European Contemporary History. You will develop analytical skills in reading and analysing historical texts and images. Therefore you will be introduced to the methods employed in Contemporary History. The bachelor programme in Contemporary History can be taken as major programme or as minor study programme. The multidisciplinary approach of the Fribourg bachelor in Contemporary History includes among others courses economic history and social sciences.

Fribourg profile

The Fribourg bachelor programme offers you multi-disciplinarity within a bilingual curriculum. The multidisciplinary outlook if the programme is ensured through the inclusion of courses in economic history and the social sciences. What makes the Fribourg bachelor programme special is its bilingual orientation. You can take the programme in German, in French or bilingually in both languages and earn a bilingual degree (distinction «Bilingual curriculum, French/German»). Through the BENEFRI network you can include courses taken in Bern or Neuchâtel into your Fribourg bachelor. You also benefit from the various activities of the Swiss Institute of Swiss Contemporary History. Studying at foreign European universities is provided for through many exchange agreements. The high number of staff members secures a broad variety of course topics, close mentoring and thereby the compatibility of work place and class room.

Learning outcomes and career openings

The bachelor programme in Contemporary History lends historical depth to your analysis of the present, fosters analytical thinking and critical discernment and teaches students to present information competently. The bachelor programme is based on various competences to be acquired. You are taught general skills in analysing and presenting complex historical matters. Students who successfully complete their bachelor in Contemporary History have expert knowledge of Swiss and European Contemporary History, can present and discuss complex historical matters properly, and are able to investigate and structure information on topics of social and political relevance.

The bachelor programme in Contemporary History provides you access to a master's degree in the same or a related field of study at the University of Fribourg or other universities in Switzerland, or abroad. It also allows you an early career start in the media, in NGOs, in documentation centers, archives and libraries, museums and cultural centers, in public or private public relations, and administrations or departments at the local, cantonal and federal level.
