Master

«Understanding their faith» is not the sole motivation of the students who enrol for our fields of study. While the phenomenon of religion has lost some significance in public perception, in the pluralist and multicultural society of today it is meeting with renewed interest. The course focuses on developing a critical way of thinking, the ability to shape the public debate on issues of values and truth, and a personal search as to how to «imagine» God in our own lives. Besides studying theology as a complete course of study, the Faculty of Theology also provides the possibility of studying theology as part of a Bachelor of Arts course and combining it with any other minor study programme of a student's choice. Students can thus tailor their theology studies by combining them with other fields.

Profile of the study programme

As distinguished from the full studies of theology for the bachelor of Theology (see the study programme «Theology»), this bachelor provides the possibility of studying theology in a major study programme and choosing minors freely.

Theology also differs from other areas of science because it has a guiding perspective of its own: it is fundamentally concerned with God and creatures, to the extent that it refers to God as their origin and goal. Theologians share responsibility for sustainable development with a human face on our planet. In view of the deregulation in the religious and ethical area (fundamentalist and esoteric movements) and in search of a peaceful co-existence of religions and cultures, the critical work of theology has a valuable contribution to make in keeping the public discourse about values and truth alive.

In this broad context, the Faculty of Theology works in the service of the church as a community as well as its individual parts, and in the service of society. The questioning and research, which characterise theology and which operate using different scientific methods, have a critical constructive function.

The Faculty of Theology of the University of Fribourg is the largest theological Faculty in Switzerland and very cosmopolitan in spirit. It is integrated into a state university and is subject to state law, as are the other Faculties of the University, but at the same time is recognised by the Church authorities and supported by the Dominican Order and the Swiss Conference of Bishops. The Faculty is unique in Europe in being completely bilingual. The courses can be attended in German or French, or in both languages (distinction «Bilingual curriculum, French/German»). More than half of the professors and almost half of the students are from abroad. The Faculty and University life are characterised by the spirit of cosmopolitan Catholicism, giving prominence and recognition to Fribourg as a place of study.

In principle, students have the possibility of completing a part of their studies at a partner university or continuing them at a university that is a part of a network to which the University of Fribourg belongs.

Career openings

The study of theology opens up career prospects in public social and cultural facilities, mediation, the publishing industry, human resources, social work and psychological counselling, counselling centres for religion and worldview issues (interreligious dialogue) and ethics counselling, as well as in adult education and journalism.
